Four people have died after the incident unfolded at St Thomas' Hospital in central London. According to witness accounts, the shots were fired inside the premises. The incident took place at about 8am local time. A Health Ministry spokesman said: "The Health Minister, Steve Brine has been informed. He is working with the emergency services and we are trying to establish the full facts. "We will do everything we can to support those who have been affected." There are concerns this is part of a much bigger incident and the scale of casualties is yet to be determined. One witness, wearing a scarf with his face covered, said people started screaming at about 8am on Wednesday. Dozens of ambulances and police cars are gathered outside of the hospital. "I could hear shouting and shouting a lot, and people were screaming," the witness said. "That's when we knew something was wrong - there was a police car, and I saw a couple of ambulances. "The police presence has been a huge increase, there was about eight police cars, and the ambulances are still here." Another witness, who said she was parked outside the hospital, saw "two people on the ground." She described the moment she saw a body, which she recognised as that of a nurse, lying on the floor with the nurse's wallet near her. "There was lots of people running around. I saw one lady, about 30 or 40-ish, on the floor. I assumed she was a nurse - she had a wallet with her name on it. She was holding it up. She was in a heap on the floor. "It was very traumatic for me. I'm in a state of shock. The man in front of me was trying to hold back a woman who was hysterical." The witness, who was in the car park, went back inside the hospital and saw a woman who had been shot in the chest in a darkened corridor. "
